THE TAX BURDEN ON TOBACCO
Historical Compilation

Foreword

Federal and state tax policies may have varied somewhat through the last decade, but peel away the watchwords of the 1980s—tax reform, no tax pledges, "user fees"—and a regressive, hidden and arbitrary cigarette excise tax remains. One thing has remained constant: Smokers bear a disproportionate share of the tax burden.

While this may have been surprising to some, for smokers it was a familiar tune. During the 1980s, smokers have seen their taxes steadily rise to meet budget deficits and other funding purposes. In fiscal year 1990 alone, 11 states raised their tax on cigarettes. In fact, from 1980 to 1990 the average state cigarette tax has risen from 13.1 cents to nearly 25 cents a pack. This 90 percent increase in the average state cigarette tax raced past the 52 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index (inflation) during the same time span.

At the federal level tobacco consumer excise taxes have been boosted once again. The federal excise tax rose from 16 cents per pack to 20 cents on January 1, 1991 and is scheduled to rise to 24 cents in 1993. The federal cigarette tax escalated from 8 cents per pack in 1982 to 20 cents per pack in 1991. This 150 percent cigarette tax increase has far exceeded inflation, and placed a rising and regressive burden on smokers.

Consumer excise taxes on tobacco generated over $10 billion in tax revenue for federal, state and local governments in fiscal year 1990. Sales taxes boost this total to well over $11 billion per year.

The tax ledger begins with a 20 cent federal tax and state taxes that average 24.7 cents per pack. Many municipalities and counties affix yet another levy on each pack. Most states top it off by adding a sales tax on the market value of cigarettes, including excise taxes—"a tax on a tax."

Out of the small group of commodities subject to consumer excise taxes, tobacco represents one of the most punitive levies. Excise and sales taxes on cigarettes represent over 30 percent of the price of a pack of cigarettes. As a consequence, smokers pay over five times the amount of taxes, as a percentage of price, as consumers of other products not subject to stiff consumer excise taxes.

The revenues from tobacco excise taxes fund projects that benefit all citizens. In consequence, smokers shoulder a greater burden of public finance. In recent times, consumer excise taxes have been earmarked for a variety of unrelated purposes. These programs have included public housing, drug rehabilitation and the expansion of intercollegiate athletic programs.

Further, increasing the inequity of tobacco taxes is their regressivity. Consumer excise taxes take a much greater percentage of a low-income person's budget compared to that of a wealthier taxpayer. The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) showed in a 1987 study that tobacco taxes were the most regressive of all excise taxes. The CBO study indicated that tobacco taxes, as a percentage of income, were 15 times greater for low-income persons compared with wealthy individuals. A subsequent study by the Coalition Against Regressive Taxation revealed that a significant hike in excise taxes would more than cancel the benefit afforded to low- and middle-income Americans by the historic 1986 Tax Reform Act.

In fiscal year 1990, cigarette taxes were levied by 50 states and the District of Columbia, along with 400 cities, towns and counties across the nation. State taxes ranged from 2 cents per pack in North Carolina to 41 cents per pack in Texas.

The statistics presented in this volume should give pause for consideration. They reflect the disproportionate and unfair burden that smokers have shouldered to help their fellow taxpayers.

Tax Year Highlights

Federal

- For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, the federal excise on cigarettes, raised on January 1, 1983 from 8¢ to 16¢ per pack of 20 cigarettes, grossed a total tax of $4,069,843,000. The tax will rise to 20¢ per pack on January 1, 1991. It is scheduled to rise, again, to 24¢ per pack in 1993.

State

- By the end of 1990, state excises on cigarettes ranged from a low of 2¢ in North Carolina to a high of 41¢ in Texas, giving a weighted average cigarette tax imposed by the states of 24.7¢ per package in addition to the 16¢ federal excise.
- For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, these taxes yielded the states $5,559,822,000 in gross cigarette excise taxes.
- During the same period there were 24,994,300,000 state tax-paid packs sold.
- The U.S. per capita consumption of cigarettes based on federal tax-paid removals was 102.6 packs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990.
- The retail price of a package of 20 cigarettes (full-priced brands) as of November 1, 1990, including federal and state excise taxes, ranged from a low of $1.28 in Kentucky to a high of $2.03 in Alaska.
- The average retail price of a package of 20 cigarettes (full-priced brands) as of November 1, 1990, was $1.61, including federal, state and municipal excise taxes.
- The average retail price of a package of 20 cigarettes including generic brands as of November 1, 1990 was $1.52, including federal, state and municipal excise taxes.
- Federal and state excise taxes accounted, on the average, for 25.6 percent of the retail price of cigarettes.

Municipal

- In nine states, municipal taxes were added to the federal and state taxes during fiscal year ending June 30, 1990.
- The municipal cigarette taxes in these states ranged from 1¢ to 20¢ a pack.
- In all, 411 cities, towns and counties imposed local cigarette taxes, which grossed $192 million in the year ending June 30.

Total

- Federal, state and municipal excise taxes on cigarettes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990, amounted to $9,821,420,000—nearly $10 billion, or $39.62 per man, woman and child.

NOTE: Net collections represent gross taxes less amounts allowed for affixing tax indicia. Years prior to 1936 are on calendar year basis; 1936 and later years are ending June 30. Adjustment has been made in totals to account for duplication which occurred when the reporting calendar year 1935 overlapped the reporting fiscal year.

*Data for individual states are based on the total number of packages taxed.
The population figures used for the states are Census Bureau estimates as of July 1 of the respective fiscal years.

Figures prior to 1960 are based upon federal dollar collections; from 1960 on figures shown are based upon "taxable removals."

Adult per capita based on Census Bureau estimates of population aged 18 and over.
